October 23rd to October 25th, 2008

Sachiko Adachi, born in Tokyo and a graduate of Waseda University, broke conventional art concepts when she introduced, in the 1980s, her "Cosmic Art".

At the Japan Expo in Los Angeles in 1988, a fashion show featured Adachi's "12 Hitoe"; medieval Japanese court ladies' 12-layered Kimono as a "moving art". In 1989, she was a winner at the Contemporary Art Expo in New York. In 1993, Adachi launched her own gallery "Space Sachi", but passed away, at age 47, just one day before the gallery opening. Exhibitions of her work continue to be held all over Japan.

Please come and join us to experience the world of Cosmic Art, with Adachi's original works in their first-ever Hawaii showing.

Most of modern art, it seems to me, is the idealistic expression of the ego. I don't express my personality or ego in these pieces. They are vibrational representations as art of the pure essence of the universe, led by the feeling of let it be. It is my belief that the universe consists of Art and Science.
